

5. A SAINT IN OUR DRESS

When Lord Krishna told Arjuna that he would come in every age, the interpretation of an average reader is that Krishna will be born with same Pitambar, Murali and Morpanch. Little do we realize, we have 'Krishna' amidst us as a 'Guru of Management' who unearths insights par se from the vast volumes and treasures not only on Indian Wisdom but also on the Wisdoms of the East, West and the world.

'Krishna' the word, first heard on my father's lap, has now become my world with discovered echoes of ages, demystified Wisdom and demonstrations of grand awareness. Today, the word 'Krishna' encompasses a larger dimension, conveying new meanings at every turn and bend of my unfolding life blessed and blissful guides and mentors like Guruji.

It is amazing to see how Guruji unfolds many a complex theories with his own skills of simplicity and Brevity in writing and demonstrating through words and diagrams.

No wonders Guruji is revered as 'Management Guru' as his words come from his unfathomable experiences and realizations. His clear style coupled with precision analysis makes his articulations perfectly acceptable and eminently actionable.

Besides, what baffles me about Guruji is his untiring spirit and zeal while moving from one session to another, from one place to another. Here I see him like Adi Shankaracharya. It is not an exaggeration to say – what Shankaracharya has half done, Guruji is doing the other half in his service to the humanity.

Guruji is indeed a saint in our dress. He is a modern messenger of management systems laid down and enshrined in our epics.

If Guruji as Krishna is Narayana, then Sujana ji is Lakshmi. I'm sure Guruji owes his generosity to her. If not for her own generous nature and unquestioning support, Guruji would not have offered so much to the world.

Guruji and Sujana ji, you make a Lakshmi- Narayana pair.

My best wishes on your 50th Wedding Anniversary
